5. Course Description

International businesses are developing project management strategies to meet and achieve their strategic and operational goals. Students demonstrate the basic principles of project management and articulate the essential components of project initiating, planning, executing, monitoring, and closing. Students describe organizational methodologies and structures specific to a project's needs and analyze the control measures required for project success. Students debate the critical role of leadership and power and the influence of project managers in relation to various stakeholders during the project lifecycle.

6. Course Rationale

In today's competitive global environment, leading organizations use project management to deliver desired business results consistently while managing their resources and constraints. Through quizzes and assignments, students explore efficient project management as a competitive advantage and recognize the major issues associated with transforming from traditional to modern leadership strategy in projects. They also practice key project management skills and employ efficient strategies in leading projects.

Through analyzing case studies, students synthesize the importance of identifying, managing, and communicating stakeholder expectations and engagement to ensure a successful project outcome.

In the final project, students analyze three key processes of the Nicol Building Project, Sprott School of Business, stakeholder management, communication management, and risk management. By completing the final project, students demonstrate in-depth practical knowledge of identifying key stakeholders, determining the information needs of the various stakeholders, devising an efficient communication strategy in the project, and developing strategies to respond to risks throughout the project lifecycle.

7. Course Objectives

Academic Integrity

Violations of academic integrity are a serious academic offence. Violations of academic integrity — presenting another's ideas, arguments, words or images as your own, using unauthorized material, misrepresentation, fabricating or misrepresenting research data, unauthorized co-operation or collaboration or completing work for another student — weaken the quality of the degree and will not be tolerated.

Process: If an alleged violation occurs, all relevant documentation will be forwarded to the Dean. If the allegation proves true, the penalties may include; a grade of Failure on the submitted work and/or course; academic probation; a refusal of permission to continue or to register in a specific degree program; suspension from full-time studies; suspension from all studies at Carleton; expulsion from Carleton, amongst others. For a first offence, at a minimum, the penalty assigned will normally be a zero on the submitted work and at least a minimum full grade reduction of the final course grade. For a second offence, at a minimum, the penalty assigned will normally lead to a suspension from studies.

Students are expected to familiarize themselves with and follow the Carleton University Student Academic Integrity Policy which is available, along with resources for compliance at: https://carleton.ca/registrar/academic-integrity/.
